HUGH DUFFY

When Hugh Duffy dons his Red Sox uniform to open his morning baseball school at the start of this season, and gets out with "his boys"—as he fondly calls them, he will be ringing up another record to stand unchallenged with his famous ".438" average—namely the number of consecutive years wearing a uniform in Organized Baseball. The exact number may never be known, but "Hughy" has left his mark; and there are a great many players in baseball today who remember well the ruddy-faced little gentleman, whose kindness and advice has helped them through the years.

VETERANS GET PREFERENCE

Veterans of World War II are getting preference at Coach Hugh Duffy's Fenway Park Baseball School this year. Anxious to give former service men a chance to break into organized baseball, Coach Duffy is devoting two and three mornings a week to tryouts for veterans, with the idea of placing them if they show ability. Coach Duffy, whose .438 batting average in 1894 has never been tied or beaten, is probably the oldest active coach in baseball today. But he's pretty young with a fungo stick.

THE 400 CLUB

Who will hit .400 this year? Boston fans are hopeful that Ted Williams, great slugger who has spent the last three years as a pilot in the United States Marines, will repeat his 1941 performance when he batted .406. In 70 years (1876-1945 incl.) only thirty major league ballplayers have hit .400 or better. Burkett, Cobb and Hornsby did it three times. Until Ted topped the mark in 1941, no one had reached the heights since Bill Terry of the Giants swung for .401 in 1930.

SUNDAY NIGHT

CATCHER HAL WAGNER SKIDS HOME with the fourth and last Red Sox run in the sixth inning after Wally Moses had rammed a single into right field. Catcher Aaron Robinson of the Yankees took the throw which came too late. Umpire is Cal Hubbard.

MR. AND MRS. TOM YAWKEY like the view from their private box on the Fenway roof more than ever, especially when the final score is posted.

START OF THE YANKEES DOWNFALL came in the fourth inning when Snuffy Stirrweiss dropped throw from Phil Rizzuto (see loose ball) and Ted Williams slid safely into second base and shortly afterward scored the first run of the game.

Harris Stops Yankees, 4-1

That was what came to Manager Bill Dickey when his wheel horse slugger and great centerfielder, Joe DiMaggio, came up with what he himself described as the "sorest arm I ever had." He had strained it, possibly because he was trying too hard to impress people that one Dom DiMaggio was a centerfielder, not THE centerfielder. Joe shouldn't have tried this. He ought to remember that he, himself, in his book called "Lucky to Be a Yankee," had said that for his money his little brother Dom was the greatest defensive centerfielder in the game. The Jolt, too, might have been a bit chary of hard throwing, if for no other reason than his recent quite-long-enforced absence due to the recurrence of the old knee injury.

Anyhow, in the fourth inning, Rudy York hammered a single to center, with Ted Williams on second. Ted scored. Joe was playing deep center. He came in and picked up the grounder and threw to keep Doerr, who had been on first, from going to third, but failed. He put so much on the ball that the arm muscles gave way.

TENTATIVE PLANNING FOR WORLD SERIES O.K.

"I'll have to toss under-handed, Bill," Big DiMag said to Manager Dickey when he came in to bat. "The arm hurts me more than I can remember having it hurt me before."

"I'd like to have you bat once more, anyhow, Joe," said Dickey. So Joe remained in there just long enough to blast his 19th homer, three-quarters of the way up the left-centerfield screen in the sixth, with two out, and, luckily, none on, giving his side its only run of the afternoon. Then he left the game, Johnny Lindell moving to center, Tommy Henrich going to right and Steve Souchock taking over at first. Now, 13 games are not equivalent to a pennant. But when you've just beaten down Chandler, and know that Big DiMag may be out for an indefinite period, if you're a Red Sox rooter you can afford to make tentative plans about what you'll do, and when, in early October.

These Yankees, without Big DiMag, look like interlopers. Funny thing about this first of four games here is that while the Yanks made eight hits for a total of 15 bases, and the Sox got eight singles and one double, the league leaders looked like winners after the fifth.

RUDY, BOBBY DO IT AT BAT, IN FIELD

York and Doerr proved some team. Rudy drove in two runs and Bobby out. Doerr's fielding was a delight to witness. He repeatedly comes up with impossible plays. In the ninth, for example, Aaron So-Hot Robinson had opened with a single to right. Lindell slammed a barbs grounder to Ripper Russell at third. The Ripper's fast throw to second, Bobby covering, was low, but Mr. Doerr, performing the stunt of catching the low throw while almost standing on his right ear, not only forced the man from first, but pivoted capably enough to get the ball over to first in time to double up the rapid Mr. Lindell.

Robby had singled through the box in the second inning. Then Lindell lashed a wicked drive toward left. But quick-reaction Ripper leaped up toward his left and speared the flying rocket with his mitt, the ball obligingly clinging in the web for a purport rather than a single or a double, as would have been the case with a lad who didn't react so rapidly as Ripper.

Ted the Kid did not have one of his brilliant days, but he helped the cause, just the same. He walked in the fourth. Doerr grounded to Scooter Rizzuto and the latter's throw to center, Snuffy Stirrweiss covering, was comically muffed by Snuffy. Both men were safe and now came the York single to center which scored Ted and led to the Joe DiMag throwing-arm injury.

One was out in the fifth when the Sox led 1-0. Johnny Pesky saucily reached outside and singled to left. He raced to third as Ted singled to the rightfield side of second base—a pitout play in the Boudreau top-sided defense—and when Doerr singled hotly to center, Mr. P. tallied. York now bounded a base hit over Bill Johnson's head at third and into leftfield and Ted, really giving the dash his all, scored from second base.

Boston's fourth and last tally came, also off Chandler, in the sixth. Hal Wagner singled to right-center with one gone. He advanced a notch on Mickey's bunt and scored as Wally Moses, back in the line-up as rightfielder and lead-off man, singled to right.

YANKEE DOODLES

There was room only in the centerfield bleachers yesterday when the game started. . . . Chances are there will be room out there today. . . . Other seats, of the reserved sort, have been sold for this, the second game of the series, which starts at 2 o'clock.

Dave Boo Ferriss will be trying for his 21st victory today and his foe will be Ernie Bonham, who earlier in the year beat the Hose, letting them down with two hits.

Two games tomorrow between the arch foes of the Atlantic seaboard, and if you have any tickets you're not going to use, we know that Eddie Doherty, tub thumper for the Hose, can use them if you get them back to him fairly early today. . . . In fact, you get the impression that the Sox office might even pay premiums on tickets for tomorrow, in order to satisfy some of their better customers who overlooked the mad rush for reserved seats for this tremendously oversubscribed twin-bill.

Williams hit for a mere 500. He walked twice, was tossed out by Stirrweiss and singled. His walks now total 125 and the record of 170 appears a long way off. . . . Stirrweiss made a funny little muff of the ball thrown to him at second for the force on Ted in the fourth, but otherwise played a slick game on defense. . . . That Joe Gordon once, and not so long ago, was a star of the stars, and now he's just filling in. . . . He was used as a pinch-hitter for Chandler in the seventh, with Lindell on third and one out. . . . He had three balls and no strikes. . . . Then went to three-and-two and eventually skied out to Pesky.

Before Joltier Joe hurt his arm he raced into remote right-centerfield, right back to the shade of the sinister centerfield bleacher wall, and glove-handed Rudy's tremendous smash. . . . It was wind-carried and yet Joe judged it accurately. . . . He had the better of Kid Brother Dom yesterday in outfield spectacularly. . . . Dom missed connections with Henrich's drive to right-center in the very first frame. . . . What ordinarily would have been an out was ruled a two-base hit because Dom had to run so far.

The same Mickey Harris who walked everybody in the ball park in the first inning over in New York a week ago last night, walked only one in this entire game. . . . He was pretty good, and he had better than good support generally.

New York writers wanted to get a quick report on Joltier Joe leaving the game. . . . A Sox writer tried to get the dope from Trainer Ed Froelich, Yankee trainer. . . . The remark was: "Let some New York writer ask, and I'll tell the story!" . . . That's not a bit chummy.

The last time Chandler went the route to win a game was July 20 when he shut out the Chicago White Sox, 2 to 0. . . . The Yankees yesterday went over the million dollars on the road. . . . The Hose went into their second million on their last western trip, but you want to remember that the Sox road figures are enhanced by reason of those bulging crowds they have had in the Yankee Stadium.

Harris Quells Yanks for Sox, Doerr, York Shine in 4-1 Win

Joe DiMaggio Hurt, Homers

By BURT WHITMAN

The up-to-date House of Yawkey, featuring Pitcher Lefty Mickey Harris, slugger Rudy York and its invaluable field captain, Bobby Doerr, slapped down the Yankees yesterday, 4 to 1, at Fenway Park before a crowd of 29,226 cashies, which lifts the total Red Sox at-home cash attendance to more than a million—1,015,166.

That old home attendance record was 730,340, made in 1942. By the time home festivities here are concluded, the total will be close to a million and a half, which, of course, is exclusive of the possible attendance which might come in a world series.

World series? That's what the man said. "The Sox now are 13 full games ahead of the second-place Yankees. Yesterday the Hose beat Spud Chandler, Yank ace, once again. He has tried to beat them in five starts this year and has succeeded but once. And Mickey Harris now has been victor in three of his four starts against this same Spud of the Bronx.

Truly a serious blow visited the Yanks yesterday in addition to the defeat which gives the Sox an 8-to-7 game advantage over the one-time Bombers in their games played to date.

U. S. General Asks For Picture of Real Germany

FRANKFURT, Germany, Aug. 16 (AP)—Lt.-Gen. J. Lawton Collins, War Department director of information, appealed here today to American correspondents to "paint the real picture of Germany instead of merely the superficial picture of the pregnant fraulein, venereal disease and scandals."

"The bulk of the people at home think this is a den of iniquity," he said.

In Berlin Kendal Foss of the New York Post, chairman of the American Correspondents Association of Berlin, said:

"To say that correspondents 'merely paint the superficial picture' is unfair to the many serious men and women working in Germany."

"But as long as there are frivolous men in the occupation, there will be frivolous reporting of their doings—no matter how high or low their station."
